When considering whether you should be granted parole, the parole board is primarily concerned with determining if you pose a risk to the community upon release. Therefore, it is in your best interest to provide additional information to support your parole application (Form 29). Set out below is a guide to structuring what relevant information should be attached to your Form 29.

SOCIAL BACKGROUND:Family Background:

Include brief details on your childhood experiences, how you were raised, your relationships with family and friends and your ongoing family life, positives and negatives.

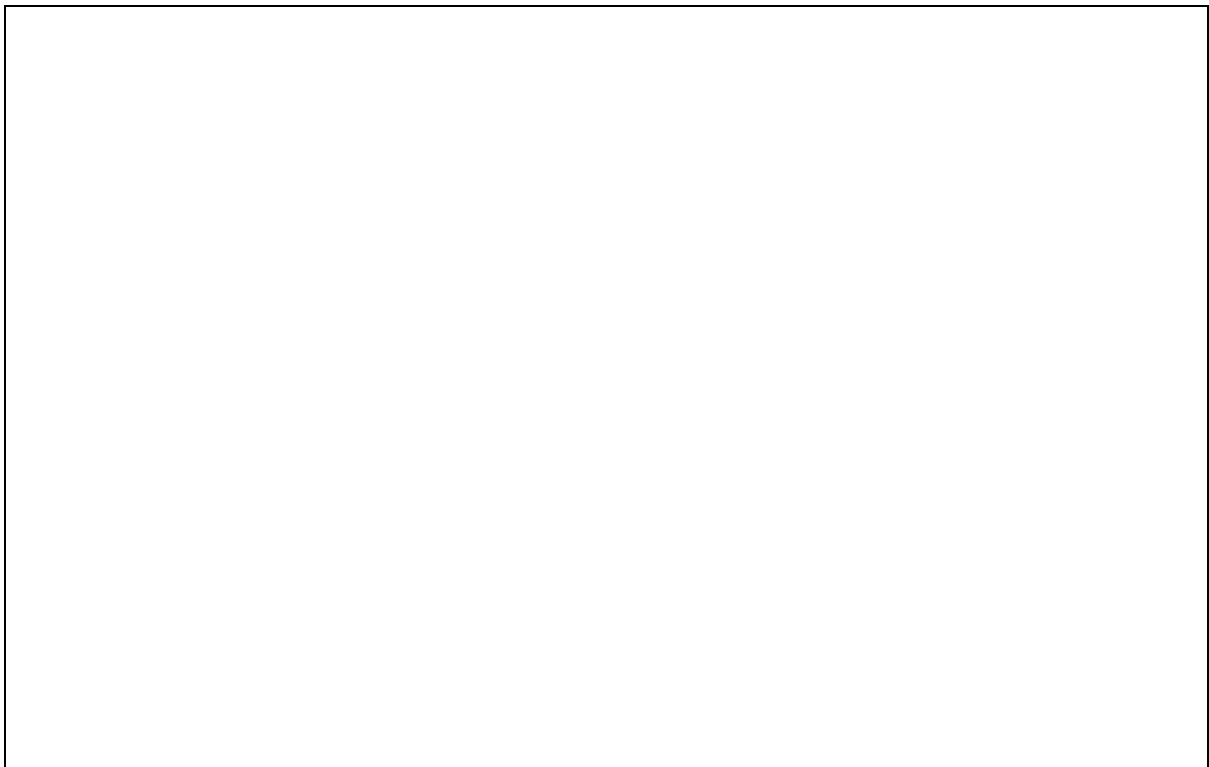

Other Relationships:

If you have a current spouse or partner please indicate how and when you first met, your partner's occupation (or means of support) and age. Does your partner have any coping problems, such as with drug or alcohol dependency, mental illness, which could be reduced with professional help?

Children:

Do you have any dependents/children? What are their names and ages? Who has custody? What are your plans regarding your children should you be released on parole?

Health:

Discuss your past and present state of health and recreational activities?

Education:

What was the level of education which you have reached? Including school, tech college, TAFE or university?

Employment History:

What is your previous (outside) employment history? What employment and job titles held?

Prison History:

Where are you currently accommodated in prison? Please provide details of your progression in prison (e.g. Have you progressed from secure to residential or are you waitlisted to go to the farm? Have you been returned to secure from residential or the farm and why?)

Have you previously had a community- based order? (Probation, parole; if yes please provide details. If you have breached the order please provide reasons for the breach.

Have you been convicted of any offences of breaches whilst in custody? If yes, please provide details; state, month, year and reasons for the breach.

Please provide information of any prison employment (including length and type of employment), and/or positions of responsibility in prison. For example, organising or leadership roles.

Criminal Background and Offences

Explain the offence you committed which resulted in the present incarceration and discuss your criminal background and other offences you have committed if applicable.

RELAPSE PREVENTION PLAN:

It is important that every prisoner, regardless of their offence type, includes a relapse prevention plan (RPP) in their parole application. Primarily, the RPP shows the parole board that you have thought about the steps that will prevent you from returning to criminal activities and behaviours.

1. What programs have you completed whilst in custody? Did you develop a RPP during any of these courses?

Name of Program/s	Date Completed	RPP developed?

If you have developed a RPP during a program you may use this as a basic structure for your parole application. However, make sure you have included all of the sections detailed below.

2. Describe the circumstances that led to your offending. In other words, what happened prior to your offending which directly caused you to offend. For example, that you were strapped for cash, involved in a relationship breakdown, turned to alcohol and/or drugs as a coping mechanism. Outline your responsibility and involvement in the criminal conduct.

3. Based on the information provided above, identify the key triggers or red flags of your offending behaviour. For example, if you have been convicted on a drug offence, your triggers may include boredom, depression, or social exclusion or addiction. Alternatively, if you have been convicted of a break and enter your triggers may include boredom, financial reasons, alcohol.

Trigger 2
Trigger 3

4. Identify some high risk situations which may lead you to re-offend. For instance, certain places such as the pub, certain people, such as your social network, who you are involved with and influenced by, certain situations or certain emotions such as anger or boredom.

High Risk Situation 2:
High Risk Situation 3:

5. Based on these high-risk situations, develop 3 hypothetical scenarios that you may find yourself in once in the community. For example, heading to the pub on a Friday afternoon, family celebration where everyone else is drinking, at a friend's house and someone brings drugs over.

Hypothetical 1:
Hypothetical 2:
Hypothetical 3:

6. Discuss the strategies you will use to stop you reoffending during these hypotheticals and high risk situations. Set out specific steps that will help you when you are in a high risk environment. Make sure that these strategies also address your triggers and red flags.

1. Thought Patterns: What is going is going on in your head, 'one drink will be alright', 'I'll just have one'
2. Positive Thinking: How will you monitor or change these thoughts? For instance 'one drink could lead to more', 'its not worth it, think of your children'
3. Immediate Actions: How will you remove yourself from the high risk situation? What excuse will you provide?

4. Personal/Professional Assistance: Once you have removed yourself from the high risk situation, who will you call?

7. Do you have any goals that you wish to achieve and would make you more determined not to offend? Include how you are going to achieve a lifestyle balance. Make sure your goals are specific, measurable, attainable, realistic and timed (SMART) For instance, employment goals, gym membership, take up a hobby, join a sporting club, education initiatives?

8. What support networks do you have that can help you if you find yourself in a high risk situation, or to achieve your goals? For example doctors, friends, crisis lines, religious mentors. Make a note if these people can or have provided supporting documentation to be attached to your parole application.

9. Why do you want to change? What benefits will there be for not offending? What specific areas of your life need special attention? For example, to be around for your children, religious reasons.

10. What are some irrational beliefs that you have? For example, 'I am not as fun when I'm sober'. How will you dispute those beliefs when they arise?

Irrational Beliefs:
Rational Beliefs:

11. What happens if you have a relapse? What strategies (step-by-step) have you set in place to regain control? Who are you going to call? Where are you going to go?

--

12. Who were the primary victims? List the direct victim (For example, if it's a break and enter, the owner of the house) and tertiary victims (community as a whole, family and friends of the victim) of your offence? Put yourself in their shoes and discuss how they would have felt and their emotions and why you are remorseful or sorry for your actions?

13. Is there anything else that you wish to discuss about your Relapse Prevention Plan?
